IRVING H. LEVIN
President

The two most dramatic news events in the NBA during the past year involved the major owner and president of the Clippers, Irv Levin.

The first event of major impact was the exchange of franchises between Levin and John Y. Brown and the movement of the Buffalo franchise to San Diego in June of 1978.

That unprecedented maneuver brought the Clippers into existence.

The second event of major importance was the signing of Bill Walton to a long-term contract with the Clippers on May 13, 1979. Levin's ability to negotiate creatively was a key factor in Walton's signing with San Diego.

His involvement in these two milestones in NBA history leave little doubt as to his stature and creativity in athletics.

Levin has earned a similar reputation in the motion picture industry. His successful business career includes various executive capacities in the production, distribution, and exhibition phases of the motion picture industry, and his contributions have earned many honors and awards, including the prestigious Motion Picture Pioneer of the Year Award in 1970.

Levin entered the motion picture industry following World War II, when he served as a Captain with the 8th Air Force. He flew 31 missions in the European Theater of Operations and was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and Air Medal with four oak leaf clusters.

As majority owner of the Boston Celtics, before exchanging that franchise for the Clippers, Levin shared in the fun and glory of a National Basketball Association championship in 1976.

He was unanimously re-elected Chairman of the Board of Governors of the National Basketball Association this past June for an unprecedented third time and also serves as Chairman of the important Television and Cable Committee.

HAROLD A. LIPTON
Executive Vice President

Harold A. Lipton, part owner of the San Diego Clippers, has a long-time involvement with both professional and amateur athletics.

Lipton and Clippers' president Irv Levin have been involved in the ownership of National Basketball Association teams since 1967, when along with Sam Schulman, they founded the Seattle SuperSonics.

Lipton and Levin then acquired the Boston Celtics, which they operated until the dramatic and unique franchise switch with Buffalo Braves owner John Y. Brown in 1978.

His interest in amateur athletics is equally extensive. Lipton is vitally concerned about the ability of American athletes to compete on an equal basis with athletes from other countries in the Olympics.

To that end, Lipton has served with the Finance Consulting Group to the President's Commission on Olympic Sports.

At present, he is of counsel with one of the largest Beverly Hills law firms, Kaplan, Livingston, Goodwin, Berkowitz, and Selvin. His legal practice has ranged from New York to the position of general counsel and first vice president of the National General Corporation, a post he resigned in 1972.

Lipton is a graduate of Harvard Law School and is still an active alumnus of that school.

He is married to a professional artist whose one-person shows have been seen in New York, California, Rome, Geneva, and Upsala, Sweden. The couple has three children, Robert, Peggy, and Kenneth. Robert is a well-known actor and Peggy starred in the popular television series "Mod Squad".

LOU LENART
Executive Assistant to the President

Lou Lenart, an associate of Clippers president Irv Levin in various business ventures, brings valuable management experience and proven leadership qualities to the franchise in his role as Executive Assistant to the President.

In addition to an association with Levin in Group L Productions, a motion picture production company, Lenart has served as Director of Marketing for a division of the Hughes Corporation and was president of a Los Angeles based construction company.

During World War II, Lenart served as a fighter-pilot in the United States Marine Corps. He joined the Marine Corps in 1940 as a Private. Lenart subsequently advanced through the ranks to Master Sergeant and won a field commission to 2nd Lieutenant. As a Captain at the end of the war, he became the Staff Officer to the Commanding General of the Marine Air Groups on Okinawa.

IRV KAZE
Senior Vice President

Irv Kaze has one of the most extensive and varied backgrounds of any professional sports executive in the country.

He has worked in baseball, football, and basketball at both the club and league level, serving in the National League office in baseball.

When the San Diego Clippers became an entity it was logical that Kaze, with his expertise in professional sports and his background in San Diego, would become a part of the management team.

Named vice president in charge of operations at the outset, Kaze was soon promoted to the position of senior vice president with the Clippers.

Kaze has served as director of public relations for the Los Angeles Angels of the American League and the Hollywood Stars of the Pacific Coast League in baseball.

He then joined the San Diego Chargers of the National Football League, where he was business manager and assistant to the president. Kaze left the Chargers to join the National League baseball office as administrator for communications.

A long time resident of San Diego, Kaze retained his home in the community during his tenure with Robert Landau Associates, a division of Kenyon & Eckhardt Advertising Agency, in New York City.

While associated with Robert Landau, Kaze coordinated on a national basis, the Pitch, Hit & Run competition, Major League Baseball's official youth program.

His organizational, promotional and administrative abilities proved a valuable asset to the Clippers in their initial season of operation and his background and experience in professional athletics was a key to the successful start of the new franchise.

HAL KOLKER
Vice President

A milestone in the history of the Clippers franchise occured on December 2, 1978 when Hal Kolker, added his promotional and creative talents to the management team in the capacity of vice president.

Kolker joined the Clippers with overall responsibility for marketing, promotions, and advertising. Under his supervision, the Clippers have become one of the NBA's most promotionally oriented teams.

The Clippers vice president was responsible for a variety of innovative promotions during the 1978-79 season and displayed keen marketing sense.

Prior to joining the Clippers, Kolker served as president of Budget Rent-A-Car of San Diego County from September of 1977 until joining the NBA club in his present capacity.

He has also previously served as personal representative for Neil Diamond, production consultant to Norman Lear, production consultant to Bob Speck Productions, and production consultant to Paramount Pictures.

Kolker is still active as a consultant to Bob Speck Productions.

HAL CHILDS
Director of Public Relations

Hal Childs, a veteran of over 20 years in sports public relations and administration, played a key role in establishing the Clippers in San Diego.

Childs was involved in the startup of the Seattle SuperSonics of the National Basketball Association and served as director of public relations four seasons with that club. He was also the assistant general manager and director of public relations for the Golden State Warriors two seasons, including the NBA championship campaign of 1974-75.

Prior to joining the Clippers, in August of 1978, Childs was director of public relations for the Seattle Mariners of the American League and was involved in the start of that franchise.

He spent ten years in the college ranks, including six years as Sports Information Director at the University of Oregon and four years in a similar capacity at Portland State College.

GENE SHUE
Head Coach

Gene Shue begins his 14th season as a head coach in the NBA with the most recent campaign one of his most successful.

Faced with the task of blending talent that had never played together as a unit, and with just two pre-season games to prepare for the regular season, Shue worked his coaching magic and produced an exciting, winning team which missed playoff activity by a whisker.

The Clippers were 43-39 and in the battle for a playoff berth until the final two games of the season. As a result of this unexpected showing, Shue finished as runner-up in the NBA's Coach of the Year voting.

Shue's lifetime NBA coaching record is 491-473 for a .509 winning percentage. Included among his accomplishments are winning the NBA's Coach of the Year honor in 1968-69 and twice coaching teams into the NBA championship series, with Baltimore in 1970-71 and with Philadelphia in 1976-77.

Ironically, the 76ers lost in the finals that season to Portland, led by present Clippers center Bill Walton.

Shue coached seven seasons at Baltimore and captured four division titles. He became head coach of the Bullets in December of 1966 when the club owned a 4-21 record. Just two seasons later, in 1968-69, the Bullets were division champions with a 57-25 mark.

He performed ten seasons as a player in the NBA. During that time, Shue scored 10,068 points, an average of 14.4 per game; five times was selected to play in the NBA All-Star Game; was a first team All-League selection in 1959-60; and a second-team All-League choice in 1960-61.

BOB WEISS
Assistant Coach

After 12 seasons as a player in the National Basketball Association, Bob Weiss made his coaching debut during the 1978-79 season as assistant coach of the Clippers.

Weiss, 37, was charged with the primary responsibility for scouting other NBA teams and co-ordinated the college scouting activity of the Clippers.

"I enjoy coaching," commented Weiss after his first season on the sidelines, "particularly working individually with the players and watching them improve."

The Clippers assistant coach played for six teams during his NBA career and compiled a 7.6 scoring average while participating in 783 regular season games.

In nine of those 12 seasons, Weiss was involved in playoff activity and averaged 7.7 points per game while appearing in 53 playoff contests.

He last played with the Washington Bullets during the 1976-77 season and was out of basketball the following year before joining the Clippers last season as assistant coach.

1978-79: A REVIEW

1978-79: A REVIEW

The Clippers, given little chance to qualify for the NBA playoffs at the start of the season, rode a 13-1 streak that stretched from mid-February to mid-March to the brink of the playoffs.

As the Buffalo Braves the previous season, the team had managed just 27 victories. Based on that performance, the experts were not optimistic about the Clippers chances.

The Clippers retained only two athletes, Randy Smith and Swen Nater, from that Buffalo team and, after a slow start, quickly moved into playoff contention.

Four consecutive losses to four playoff-bound teams in late March killed the Clippers playoff dreams, but the team still finished with a 43-39 record and a better regular season mark than one Eastern Division playoff qualifier.

Lloyd (All-World) Free was the key man in an exciting offense that averaged 113.1 points per game and was sixth in the NBA.

Free averaged 28.8 points per game, second-best point total in the NBA, and was a second-team All-League selection. He led the NBA in free throws made with 654 and free throws attempted with 865.

Smith, his partner in backcourt, carried a 20.5 per game average and continued his amazing streak of durability by stretching his consecutive game string to 595. He has not missed a game since his rookie season of 1971-72.

Freeman Williams handled third guard duties and compiled a 10.4 scoring average while earning a spot on the All-Rookie second-team.

At center Swen Nater and Kevin Kunnert combined for 17.2 points and 15.9 rebounds per game. In addition, Nater was fifth in the NBA in field goal percentage with a .569 mark.

Kermit Washington was the Clippers leading rebounder and sixth in the league in field goal shooting with a .562 mark and combined with Nick Weatherspoon, the team's third leading scorer (13.8), and Sidney Wicks to handle the forward assignments.

The Clippers averaged a solid 9,230 fans per game for the 41 regular season home dates and over the final eight home contests the average was 12,043.

The Clippers proved to be tough at home, particularly late in the season. San Diego posted a 29-12 record at the San Diego Sports Arena and over the final 15 games was 13-2.

The Clippers are solidly established, both on the floor as a highly competitive team and with the fans, who have enthusiastically identified with San Diego's entry in the NBA.
